EXCELLENT

Teamwork

Teamwork is the ability for a group to work together as one unit to achieve levels of excellence that cannot be reached individually. An athletic team does not require having the best players to win the championship, but rather have a group of individuals who can communicate and perform effectively together.

Youth 10-13

“How do I become a team player?”

EXERCISE

- Become a Team Player:
 - Help a sibling or friend with something they need.
 - Work as a family to clean the garage, yard or shed.
 - When your teacher or coach needs a volunteer, be the first to offer your help.
 - If there is a less than desired job or task to be completed, do it willingly.

- On the parent card, have a parent, teacher or relative write their comments on how you did:
 - Becoming a team player
 - What sacrifices you made to be helpful
 - Extra effort toward work you put in to help someone else out
 - What was your attitude while doing this exercise

1. Think about the end result. How will it turn out? Are you laying your personal opinion aside to see the team vision accomplished?
2. If you are on the “team” then start playing or working with 100% effort.
3. Communicate! You have to speak to your team, do not assume anything. If difficulties arise, discuss them right away. Be willing to alter the plan to accomplish the team goal.

Building SELF-CONFIDENCE is not something that can be done in a 3-week homework assignment. It is something that is built up over time. Think of your SELF-CONFIDENCE as a tree that continues to grow with roots getting deeper and deeper with time. Initially the tree is small and fragile, and with time and nourishment, the tree becomes very large and strong.

Seek things that will challenge you then pledge to yourself that you will accomplish your goal. Don't live your life being complacent. If your tree is not growing, then it is rotting. This is the nature of life. Humans are no different and therefore must continue to improve physically and mentally.
